

About the Chilean Temple Initiative

The Chilean Temple Initiative is the US Bahá'í community's response to an international call made by the Universal House of Justice, the international governing body of the Bahá'í community, to build a Bahá'í House of Worship in Santiago, Chile.

Dedicated to raising the lion's share of the estimated $27 million needed for the Chilean Temple, the US effort is under the umbrella of the Kingdom Project, a national plan to develop the infrastructure of the US Bahá'í community.
